“John has achieved his dream of leaving Noble’s sheltered workshop and finding a community job in the automotive field, something he now has in common with his brothers. Through this job he has developed a support network of his coworkers who have become his friends, he is earning a good wage and contributing to our community. We envision many more successes like John’s thanks to this grant.”

TRUSTEES’ LETTER

The Nina Mason Pulliam Charitable Trust marked its fifth anniversary of grantmaking in 2002. As we reflect upon the first five years, we are pleased to see how the Trust’s family of grantees in Indiana and Arizona has grown, both in numbers and in depth of service to the citizens of each state.

As you read the 2002 annual report, we hope you will be inspired by what our grantees have to say about their work and what the Trust’s support has meant to the fulfillment of their missions. This includes organizations that were supported directly by Mrs. Pulliam during her lifetime, as well as grantees that have won the support of the Trust over the first five years of its existence.

Since the Trust began its grantmaking in 1998, it has awarded $71,419,325 to 476 nonprofit organizations, almost exclusively in Arizona and Indiana and primarily in the communities of Phoenix and Indianapolis. Of these dollars, 63 percent has served people in need; 18 percent has protected animals and nature; and 19 percent has enriched the quality of life in our communities and neighborhoods.

In addition to serving our core communities, the Trust also stepped forward to assist families and communities during times of crisis. From our assistance during the tragedies of September 11, 2001, to our outreach to the communities scorched during the largest wildfires of Arizona’s history this past summer, the Trust has responded to community need, as Nina Mason Pulliam did throughout her life.

In the fall of 2002, the Trust also welcomed the second cohort of Nina Mason Pulliam Legacy Scholars. Nina Scholars are nontraditional college students, a very underserved scholarship population in both states. Nina Pulliam believed that education is a tool that changes lives, and we already have seen its effects. This past year, two young adults whose parents became Nina Scholars re-enrolled in college after seeing their parents return to school. We also have had parents of Nina Scholars decide to return to school, and one Nina Scholar already has earned her associate’s degree in nursing. The Trust is truly inspired to be leading the way for these students and families.

As we look to the future, please join us in celebrating our first five years of grantmaking accomplishments. We are confident that the legacy of Nina Mason Pulliam will long surpass the 50-year lifetime of her Trust through the contributions of the dedicated organizations we support.

In 2002, the Trust reaffirmed its strong commitment to helping people in need as more citizens of Arizona and Indiana relied upon the services of nonprofit organizations, due to the effects of a weak economy. And while demand for services was strongly up for the majority of our grantees, charitable contributions and government grants were down for the same reason, creating a growing gap in financial resources.

In response, even though our annual grants distribution budget decreased by 10 percent, as a direct result of the downturn in the stock market, we increased the amount of funding to organizations serving women, children, youth and families, the disabled and the elderly. We also responded to several compelling requests for renewed or continued funding to assure badly needed services continue uninterrupted.

For the first time, in 2002 our support of programmatic activity exceeded what we awarded to capital projects. While we continued to make some major commitments for new facilities, we focused primarily upon increasing our grantees’ abilities to serve needy clientele through collaboration with other nonprofit agencies and local government, as the new Human Services Campus for the homeless in central Phoenix aspires to do.

We also were supportive of model projects that have the potential for demonstrating better and more efficient ways to provide services. In the area of health care for the elderly, the Geriatric Resources for Assessment and Collaborative Care of Elders program underway at Wishard Memorial Hospital in Indianapolis is one such experiment.

While being especially sensitive to more immediate needs for basic human services, the Trust also continued to invest for the long term through its commitment to support a second new cohort of 40 Nina Scholars. Participating schools are Arizona State University, Maricopa Community Colleges, Indiana University Purdue University Indianapolis and Ivy Tech State College, Central Indiana Campus. At the end of 2002, there were 73 Nina Scholars working to realize their dreams for themselves and their families at these four educational institutions.

The Trust also continued support for protecting domesticated and wild animals and for environmental projects that conserve natural habitats for future generations and help more people enjoy and appreciate these precious resources today. While Arizona and Indiana have dramatically contrasting natural beauty and resources, the Trust provided two grants of $100,000 to the National Audubon Society to establish offices in each state to develop educational programs, especially for school-age participants.

Programs that enrich community life for all through the arts and community revitalization also continued to receive the Trust’s grant resources. In 2002 there were many grants involving young people. In Phoenix, the Trust renewed its support of Valley Youth Theatre’s Literacy and the Arts program and provided additional support for the After-School Playhouse. Valley Youth Theatre’s actors, musicians and technicians are primarily children who range in age from 7 to 19. Last year the Literacy in Arts performances and activities reached 5,000 youth across 38 different schools. The After-School Playhouse worked in depth with one elementary school in which more than 50 percent of the students come from homes where English is the second language.

We have learned a great deal from our grantees during our first five years. In the pages that follow, we invite you to read what they have to say about how the Trust has made a difference in their abilities to realize their missions.
“Our Life Plan Program rehabilitation program is fully enrolled at 24 homeless men and, for the first year ever, we have a waiting list! Some are rejoining families abandoned long ago, and many others are assuming a responsible place in society for the very first time.”

NINA MASON PULLIAM LEGACY SCHOLARS

In 2001 the Trust established the Nina Mason Pulliam Legacy Scholars Program to open doors of opportunity and education for men and women who are often overlooked for traditional college scholarships. The individuals selected by the four participating universities and community colleges to be Nina Scholars all aspire to overcome financial, social or physical challenges.

Education was important to Nina Mason Pulliam. She believed that education is a crucial tool to self-sufficiency and personal fulfillment. The Nina Scholars program is a natural extension of her convictions and an appropriate way for the Trust to honor its benefactress. The Trust’s main priority is to help people in need, and the Nina Scholars program further enhances this mission.

Participating schools are Maricopa Community Colleges and Arizona State University in the Phoenix area and Ivy Tech State College, Central Indiana Campus and Indiana University Purdue University Indianapolis (IUPUI).

Very few scholarship programs currently exist for the nontraditional student anywhere in the United States. The Nina Scholars program especially seeks to assist men and women, 25 years and older with dependents, who have not yet attended college or who are seeking to return after a long absence. They share the goal of acquiring a college degree in order to increase future opportunities for their families. Others eligible for consideration include adults and traditional college-age students who are physically disabled and youth seeking to enter college for the first time who have grown up in the child-welfare system and have no form of financial support.

Along with a full scholarship (which includes tuition, fees and books), each Nina Scholar receives a $2,500 living allowance to assist with such necessities as child care and transportation. Additionally, each school has a Nina Scholars coordinator to assist the students and to coordinate special programs and activities.

“We so appreciate the Nina Mason Pulliam Charitable Trust’s commitment to establishing a long-term scholarship program that provides these students the key ingredients they need to succeed,” said Jennifer Steele, MCC Nina Scholars coordinator.

“With financial obstacles removed and a safety net of guidance and mentoring in place, these students will have the opportunity of a lifetime to prepare for a career and achieve goals they perhaps thought were impossible to achieve.”

“Our Scholars are supportive of each other. We meet regularly in an open forum where the Scholars discuss challenges they may be experiencing in the classroom, celebrate their academic successes together and, most importantly, provide a support network to each other. Overall, our Scholars become a family,” said Marsha Curtin, IUPUI Nina Scholars advisor.

“As the Nina Scholars are successful, their stories of achievement inspire other students and family members to seek higher education. We have already seen this happen within a number of our Scholar families. Sisters, brothers and mothers have returned to classes, due to a Nina Scholar in the family,” said Cory Gonzales, Nina Scholar coordinator at ASU.

“One of our Scholars has had his mother, his father and his older sister begin taking classes at Ivy Tech,” added Kathleen Vahle, Nina Scholars program manager at Ivy Tech.

“This is an outstanding program that far surpasses a simple monetary gift. With the comprehensive support offered by the Nina Mason Pulliam Charitable Trust, the Scholars will have a far smoother path through college,” Vahle concluded.
“I wonder if I would have been able to graduate had I not had the Trust’s help. The day I graduated, my 12-year-old son said to Beth Richardson, Dean of the School of Nursing, ‘I am so proud. This is the best Christmas present a son could get.’”

The Villages of Indiana
Indianapolis, Indiana
1999, 2000 and 2002 Grants

A three-time funding recipient for the Trust, The Villages is one of the most respected child welfare organizations in the Midwest, serving more than 1,000 children and families every day at its 26 offices throughout Indiana.

The Trust first supported the Special Needs Adoption Initiative in 1999 to help build a best practices, special needs adoption infrastructure and provide a specialist to recruit, match and train families for abused, abandoned, neglected or medically-challenged children waiting to be adopted.

“The Trust’s support helped us to achieve permanency and adoption for these special needs children, one child at a time. We serve the full array of special needs children. Providing services and establishing support systems for our families is critical to their success,” said Sharon E. Pierce, president and CEO of The Villages of Indiana.

In 2000 the Trust provided seed funding for the Children’s Village, the organization’s childcare center in Decatur Township, providing cutting-edge enrichment and educational programs for preschool children. The center’s southwest Indianapolis location provides a needed service to its diverse target population, including low-income and welfare-to-work parents.

“The Children’s Village was a strategic directive for us to continue our work and broaden our mission to early childhood services,” Pierce said. “We recognize that affordable, quality childcare can often serve as a preventative service for the vulnerable population of welfare-to-work mothers.”

“We have created an environment for children to flourish, and our staff excels at working with special-needs children. Our families represent all cultures and run the economic spectrum. We believe this mix creates a cultural awareness that will help our children become caring adults,” Pierce added.

“With the Trust’s grant in 2002, our Family Connection Network was enhanced and strengthened with support services for our adoptive and kinship families. Partnerships with the Martin Luther King Multi-Service Center, Christamore House and the South East Community Center provided post-adoption support groups to more than 100 of our families,” Pierce explained.

“We firmly believe that building a strong community infrastructure will help to support and sustain Indiana’s very special children. Those children will indeed be able to experience the feeling of being loved and cared for by their very own forever family.”

Arizona Women’s Education and Employment, Inc.
Phoenix, Arizona
2000, 2001 and 2002 Grants

“The Trust’s three years of support has been capacity building for the services we provide our clients and for the growth of our organization,” said Carol Crockett, development director for AWEE.

AWEE was founded in 1981 to provide job readiness and job placement support to low-income mothers on welfare wishing to move out of the public assistance system. Today, AWEE serves women, men and youth who are without a job, need better work with sustainable wages and benefits, or who need support to stay employed.

The Trust’s grants in 2000 and 2001 provided support for case management, job readiness training, specialized workshops and job placement and retention training to assist the unemployed and underemployed. “Low-income women were assisted into the workforce, and the skills the Trust helped them acquire helped keep these ladies employed,” Crockett said.

During this time, AWEE went from being 83 percent publicly funded to being 77 percent privately supported. “During this transitional time, the Trust funding allowed us to maintain the same level of services and programs for our clients. It was a great accomplishment for us and the Trust was a critical partner,” added Crockett.

In 2002 the Trust provided operating support to sustain AWEE’s marketing and fundraising endeavors. “This moved the agency even closer to its goal of becoming a privately funded agency, which has the freedom to assist anyone because we are not mandated by government funding policies,” Crockett explained.

“Our clients may be referred by an agency or hear about us on their own. However this partnership happens, AWEE is life changing for women. And the Trust gives us the freedom to serve all who come through our doors seeking better employment opportunities and ultimately a better life.”

Society of St. Vincent de Paul
Phoenix, Arizona

“Five years of giving has made the difference for our organization. The Trust’s support has allowed us to take our dreams and visions and turn them into a reality for the thousands of people we serve,” said Stephen Zabilski, executive director of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul.

In 1998 the Trust supported operating expenses at Ozanam Manor, St. Vincent de Paul’s transitional shelter for the elderly and disabled homeless in central Phoenix.

In 1999 the Free Medical and Dental Clinic received support to provide free dental services to more than 5,500 uninsured working families and the elderly. “When a child won’t smile because of rotting teeth, they shy away, and habits that start in childhood are difficult to break in adulthood. With the clinic, kids leave with a smile, it is their lease on life. It’s not just about teeth, they become confident and their lives are improved,” Zabilski said.

With Trust support in 2000, the Society purchased a tractor and refrigerated trailer for perishable food collection and distribution to homeless, low-income individuals and families in central and northern Arizona. This facilitated the creation of one of the largest food distribution programs in the state. “What could be more basic than providing nourishment to the people we serve. Our truck puts our ministry on wheels,” Zabilski added. “During the terrible wildfires last summer, the truck was also on the road delivering food to evacuation shelters across northern Arizona.”

Community volunteers provide friendly service to diners at St. Vincent de Paul.
In 2001 and 2002, “because of the Trust’s support and guidance, our dining rooms turned into something more. Not only did we reach out to service hunger but we engaged our families, putting them on the road to becoming more self-sufficient with resources and skill-set assistance,” Zabilski explained.

With the Trust grant, the Society developed a comprehensive case management Opportunity Program to help individuals and families make the transition from poverty, homelessness and near homelessness to greater stability and self-sufficiency. “The program assesses the needs and qualifies for referral those guests currently utilizing congregate meal programs at five St. Vincent dining room locations.”

“Not only did the grant make this possible but, just as important, the Trust staff’s assistance and wisdom helped us create this program,” Zabilski said. “These programs would not have happened without the Trust. The Trust is not afraid to step into something early and provide support at the critical stage. The support we’ve been given has allowed us to go out and impact lives across the state,” Zabilski said.

In its second year, the Arizona Farmers’ Market Nutrition Program brought better nutrition to more than 20,000 low-income women, children and seniors. The private and state-funded voucher program allows participants to shop for fresh vegetables at local farmers’ markets.

Many of the voucher customers live in downtown areas without a grocery store in the immediate area giving them access to fresh produce. In many instances, the accessibility of

A great learning environment plus a technology-rich setting equals real-world opportunity for the students at Indiana School for the Blind.

“The Nina Mason Pulliam Memorial Library has expanded the opportunity for students to access information in real time. Traditionally, they were limited to information that was only available in large text or Braille. Anything in print is available today thanks to the advances in technology. Now, students have access to newspapers and magazines the day they are received. They are more independent in making decisions about their futures,” said James Durst, superintendent at the Indiana School for the Blind.

The Trust grants, coupled with matching funds from Lilly Endowment, Inc., created a new state-of-the-art and handicapped-accessible facility. The original library was constructed in 1929 and had not been modernized. The new library has computers throughout – 10 with Internet access. Students can connect with the Indianapolis-Marion County Public Library and other state libraries to obtain books on inter-library loan, as well as interact with the blind community throughout the state. Specialized equipment, such as the Kurzwille, allows students to scan a book or article, have the type enlarged on a screen, hear an audio play-back of text, and print the document in Braille for at-home enjoyment.

“This library changes everything for our kids,” Durst said. “Our students now compete on a more level playing field with their sighted counterparts.”

Overall grades have improved, there is a more thematic approach to learning, and teachers are working together to create a more holistic learning environment with more timely materials and topics. “The curriculum is more research driven and the library has allowed us to be a part of the standard-based education for Indiana,” Durst explained.

The library is the gathering place for students as well. “With about 50 percent of the students living on campus, the library was designed with areas for students to access information, log onto the Internet, chat with each other and enjoy leisure reading,” Durst said. “We have hired a second librarian and expanded our hours for our students.”

convenience foods outweighed the benefits of fresh. In addition, homebound seniors were left with few area shopping options.

The Association piloted its program in 2001 based upon the Farmers’ Market Program successfully operating in 33 other states. To improve access to fresh, locally grown produce, it established a partnership with Community Food Connections, Arizona Department of Economic Security, USDA and Arizona Community Action Association. “Our goal was to put nutrition back in eating,” according to Cynthia Gentry, director of Community Food Connections.

“Because of the Trust’s support, we were able to show the Arizona Department of Health the success of this program. The Department has now created a position to establish a year-round program in Arizona,” Gentry added.

“The first year, we had 12 markets with 40 growers; in 2002 there were 24 markets with 60 growers,” she said. “Three times a year we combine the Farmers’ Market with a Health Fair and create a neighborhood event for the benefit of all.”

According to Ginny Hildebrand, executive director of the Association of Arizona Food Banks, there were $180,000 worth of vouchers distributed to low-income senior citizens and women qualifying for the Women, Infants and Children (WIC) program. With second-year funding from the state, USDA and the Trust, in 2002 the program doubled its participants.

“This program has provided better food choices for our customers. Now our participants are blooming. Health is better, eating habits have improved,” Hildebrand said.

Goodwill Industries of Central Indiana
Indianapolis, Indiana
2000 Grant (for three years)

“There is an upsurge of people who see the value of education, who might say, ‘I made a mistake along the way but I want to try again.’ This is the opportunity to complete an education and move toward a more fulfilling life,” said Carolyn McCutcheon, director of education and youth services for Goodwill Industries of Central Indiana.

The Trust’s three-year grant funded a collaborative program between Goodwill, C Marian Health Services and the Day Adult High School at Indianapolis Public Schools’ Hope Education Center, with a goal of increasing high school enrollment, graduating more students and helping them become gainfully employed. The grant provided funding to hire a collaborative manager to develop the program with the partners and students.

“We tend to have more male students, between the ages of 16 and 21. The majority are minority and have left the ‘traditional’ education system and may be homeless, involved in the corrections system, come from foster care and are parents,” according to McCutcheon.

“With this program, students have the support to stay in school. The flexibility is there to assist them in dealing with their circumstances, to continue school in spite of their challenges,” she added.

“Education is made real, it is not just a subject-based approach. Here, the information prepares students for a career path they have chosen,” McCutcheon explained.

“Our employer partner C Marian is right down the street and providing health careers that are greatly needed and viable the future. The experience there shows our students the range of work in the healthcare field, whether it is working in the hospital at any number of levels, or in the healthcare field generally,” McCutcheon said. “Many of our students come from work-limited environments and just do not know what opportunities exist for them.”

In three years, 1,228 young adults have enrolled in the program and 395 have graduated.
"This enhanced learning program is beginning to ‘bear fruit.’ We are now seeing evidence of rising grades. The grant is making a positive difference in the lives of many at-risk youth."

“Nina loved all animals, domestic or wild, large or small. She had the ability to connect with them. She supported causes during her life that took care of animals, as well as preserved their habitats. Nina celebrated nature and its beauty; she worked to preserve its gifts for generations to come.”

PROTECTING ANIMALS AND NATURE

Indianapolis Zoological Society
Indianapolis, Indiana
2000 Grant

“Ninety percent of elephant reproductive research happening in the world happens here at the Indianapolis Zoo,” according to Michael Crowther, president and CEO of the Indianapolis Zoological Society.

Crowther believes the Zoo’s success with artificial insemination, resulting in two elephant babies, is the future of elephant reproduction in captivity and will perhaps even pave the way for elephant reintroduction in the wild.

Facing loss of habitats, poaching threats and disrupted reproductive cycles in response to these challenges, African elephants are an endangered species.

“The Trust’s support allowed us to redefine the physical needs of our facility, setting the tone for elephant facilities in the 21st Century. There is room for the elephants when they are inside and great access for them to go outside and explore,” said Crowther.

“Our elephants have an external environment that allows for natural societal groups, not forced ‘artificial clusters.’ We can separate the bulls and cows as it occurs in nature,” Crowther explained.

The two-acre play area has room for the elephants to roam grassy knolls and a pool that allows them to fully immerse themselves and swim under a wonderful waterfall feature.

“Most people do not know that elephants are great swimmers. The public gets wonderful exposure to natural elephant behavior. They get to see them do something compelling – they can have interaction with them,” Crowther said.

“Inside, our elephant barns are designed to deal with Indiana’s winters with in-floor heating. The air-handling system keeps respiratory illnesses from airborne hay particles at bay, and our state-of-the-art veterinary and breeding facilities assure the health and welfare of our elephants. In addition, our barn withstands the stresses of a 13,000 pound bull elephant who likes to stand on his hind legs and stretch against the wall,” Crowther added.

The African Elephant Preserve, considered the benchmark for all facilities in the U.S., averages a visit a week from zoo representatives across North America.

Of the 1.1 million people who visit the Zoo annually, 60 percent are children. Another 100,000 school children come through education programs. “In addition to Indiana’s children, our Distance Learning Program takes our elephants into classrooms via the Internet all the way to California,” Crowther said.

“We believe our elephants affect people and change their hearts. Emotion is the gateway to the intellect and how we change the way people think,” Crowther said. “And that ultimately will be the future of these magnificent creatures.

Indianapolis Zoo animal keepers give attendees interactive opportunities with the elephants.
“All nonprofits need partners in order to succeed. When the Trust invested in our program to use science to save land around the Grand Canyon, it helped us to be ambitious and brave.”

PROTECTING ANIMALS AND NATURE

Desert Botanical Garden
Phoenix, Arizona
1999 Grant

“The Nina Mason Pulliam Desert Research and Horticulture Center has given us a place on the national and international stage,” said Ken Schutz. “Without the Trust’s support of this Center and its belief in our efforts, we would not be a world-class facility today.”

The Desert Botanical Garden is a destination to more than 250,000 visitors a year and thousands of students, of all ages, seeking knowledge about desert plants.

The library collection is now available and accessible to the public. “Anyone who comes in can study. Before, we did not have the facility to allow this,” Schutz explained. “You’ll find K through 12 teachers, university faculty and students, noted horticulturists and visitors who just love the desert landscape spending time in the Research Center.”

“Our scientists are working in each of two laboratories and the new Herbarium, cataloguing and building one of the most comprehensive archive collections of desert plants in the world.” Rolling storage units protect and preserve the freeze-dried samples of species collected from deserts around the world.

The Research Center has changed the culture at the Garden, according to Schutz. “There is a new sense of identity, cohesiveness, spirit and excitement. We are now a meeting place for researchers from around the world.”

“Our research, science and conservation efforts all live and thrive in one building, thanks to this grant,” he added.

Arizona Humane Society
Phoenix, Arizona
1999 Grant

“Adoption of nearly 100 percent of the healthy adoptable animals entering the doors of the Arizona Humane Society’s Nina Mason Pulliam Campus for Compassion, is what the grant to fund this facility has accomplished,” said Cheryl Naumann, president and CEO of the Society.

In the Campus’ first year of operation, homes were found for more than 8,000 dogs, cats, guinea pigs, rabbits, turtles, birds, mice, hamsters and the like.

The Nina Mason Pulliam Campus for Compassion is a national model for building healthy relationships between people and animals.

The Nina Mason Pulliam Campus for Compassion is a national model for building healthy relationships between people and animals.

Children and families are touched by the educational and therapeutic programs housed at the Campus, including the Stardust Equestrian Therapy program that allows us to assist at-risk youth, furthering our mission of building healthy relationships between people and animals,” she added.

“And, for families needing low-cost, spay-neuter services and wellness care for their animals, our on-site clinic is open four days a week.”

Naumann credited the Trust’s grant as pivotal to the organization in completing its capital campaign in record time. “The Trust took a leadership role in supporting our campaign, at a time when our organization desperately needed to expand to a second facility. Through the Trust’s vote of confidence, we successfully attracted many other key donors.”

“Because of the Trust’s extraordinary gift, we are able to save lives every day and bring Mrs. Pulliam’s love of animals into homes across our state.”

PROTECTING ANIMALS AND NATURE

Friends of the White River
Indianapolis, Indiana

“We are preserving the river – it is the connection between neighborhoods and nature,” said Kevin Hardie, executive director of Friends of the White River. The river provides more than 60 percent of the city’s drinking water and is also the defining geological feature of Indianapolis.

The Trust’s funding has supported the first full-time director for Friends of the White River, “assuring that the river and those who use it will have an advocate at the table,” Hardie said. “Trust dollars also funded Focus on Urban River Environments (FOURE), an awareness/action campaign that has created broad-based support for a variety of river enhancement projects. FOURE has enabled Friends of the White River to reach citizens, elected officials, neighborhood groups, educational institutions and service groups to come together for the good of the river.”

“We have seen that White River’s protection and improvement cannot occur without public-and private-sector partnerships and involvement,” Hardie explained. “The Trust’s support has taken our organization from being a participant to becoming the leader in this effort to approach river preservation in a cooperative manner that will have a long-lasting effect on the quality of life in Indianapolis and the state.”

Among the many community-based partnerships Friends has spearheaded, the River School provides one of the greatest long-term impacts. “Interfacing people, neighborhoods and schools with the river is the hope for the future,” according to Hardie. “The river is the perfect forum to bring these groups together. Education – for all ages, at all levels – is the vehicle that ignites change.”

“The lead gift we received from the Trust for the Earth Discovery Center at Eagle Creek Park allowed us to move forward with our campaign. It added credibility to our cause in the eyes of other potential donors.”

ENRICHING COMMUNITY LIFE

Make a Difference
Phoenix, Arizona
2002 Grant

“Creating community change is a ripple effect, it happens one volunteer at a time,” according to Alison Rapping, president and CEO of Make a Difference. Valley nonprofit agencies, neighborhood associations, schools and government groups will be making waves after working with the Make a Difference training program for agency project and volunteer management skills.

“We were finding that organizations require committed, enthusiastic volunteers; however, they also need training in project management and assistance in building an infrastructure to utilize and effectively engage and retain them,” Rapping added.

The Trust grant funded the position of Doreen Pollack, director of volunteer programs. She and the staff of Make a Difference developed, with user organizations, a detailed manual and training program to take volunteerism and project management to another level.

“This grant was transformational for our agency. It took us from a volunteer recruitment and placement agency to a capacity-building organization for the community groups we serve,” Rapping added. “We are now able to serve as a consultant that assists an organization in identifying and developing innovative volunteer projects which support them in fulfilling their mission.”

“Volunteerism has never been so critical for agencies challenged with massive budget cutbacks, reducing employee numbers and programs. We are finding that volunteers are filling the budget-cutting void for many of our agencies,” Rapping explained.

“With the Trust as our partner, we have created a program with national impact in supporting volunteerism and project management. This manual will soon be in the hands of our national organization, CityCares, and disseminated to our affiliate organizations in 25 states and nine international markets,” Rapping said. “The Trust pushed us to explore the possibilities, and our communities are beginning to see the rewards.”

The Orchard School
Indianapolis, Indiana

“We see parents more involved in their children’s education. We find that teachers are more energized. We have more confident kids of all ages who are engaged in what they are experiencing in the classroom. The enthusiasm is contagious,” said Susan Adamson, program director for the Indiana Partnership for Young Writers.

This highly innovative, writing program was spearheaded by The Orchard School, an independent school (prekindergarten through grade eight), in partnership with the Indianapolis Public Schools. The Trust’s $300,000 grant funded the three-year pilot project with one goal in mind: teaching kids to tap into what they have to say – to write skillfully and with a meaningful purpose. A published book of student works, “When the Sun Blooms I Say Good Morning,” celebrated the first collection of student writings.

Isoke Nia begins a writers’ workshop with explanation of the day’s activities.

The initial group of 20 Indiana teachers worked under the tutelage of Isoke Nia of Teacher’s College Reading and Writing Project at Columbia University in New York City.

“Our goal is to train local educators and mentor them as the local leaders of this program,” Nia said. Trust funding has helped more than 150 teachers spread the written word throughout Indiana.

“This is the best example of differentiated learning. Everyone can do it. Everyone has something to say. It is not lock-step learning,” Adamson said. “With this program, kids from kindergarten on up learn skills to be good writers; it gives them tools for thinking and living, for organizing and developing language, and it helps them understand themselves. In a nutshell, this learning creates dignity from within,” she added.

From “how-to” beginnings to memoirs at the more advanced level, kids learn to take notes, to read like writers, to understand structure, to work in groups and to help each other.

“They are immersed in crafting writing in all genres and that spills over to all other learning disciplines,” Adamson said.
ENRICHING COMMUNITY LIFE

Indiana State Museum Foundation
Indianapolis, Indiana

"The Ice Age Gallery has played a very important role in transforming the public perception of the Museum and what we are. I love to overhear visitors say, 'Who would have thought a world-class place like this would be in Indiana?' This place shows us what is possible – what the citizens, the public and the private sector can do," said J. Ronald Newlin, Indiana State Museum executive director.

The gallery that bears Nina Mason Pulliam’s name features a limestone cave, post-glacial bog, bones of Ice Age creatures and interactive exhibits. The Ice Age Tunnel documents and showcases prehistoric animals that once inhabited Indiana.

"This grant has allowed us to communicate scientific knowledge about the Ice Age, adding to the world’s knowledge base. Our exhibition space allows us to showcase the work of our scientists in a gallery setting for the public to enjoy and learn from," said Newlin. "It reinforces that the Museum is scientifically based as well as historically, allowing us to broaden our brand to one of art, science and culture."

"From a financial perspective, the Trust’s support helped us transform our thinking from an organization that was solely state funded to one of a broad diversity of support, with strong membership and earned revenue," Newlin added. "The Trust’s support also assisted the Museum to secure a dollar-for-dollar challenge grant from Lilly Endowment, Inc."

More than 30 percent of attendees are school groups that are fulfilling part of their academic curriculum at the Nina Mason Pulliam Ice Age Gallery. In addition, distance learning programs send live-time transmission to schools reaching from Maine to Texas.

"We believe that this exhibit lets us look at the impact of actions, the cost of extinction and to discuss these issues in a non-threatening way. It also lends itself to reaching people and teaching the roles of animals in our everyday life," Newlin explained. "Most of all, it challenges us to approach the future through different eyes."

West Valley Fine Arts Council
Litchfield Park, Arizona
2000, 2002 Grant

“A water reclamation plant designed a community park around our sculpture, now the community has a place to gather and become neighbors. Our sculpture is the apex,” said Marcia Ellis, executive director of West Valley Fine Arts Council.

The power of art has embraced community need through Gallery 37. The program provides a broad spectrum of youth, ages 15 to 18, with on-the-job training as apprentices to professional artists. Together, they are commissioned to create pieces for community enjoyment. The youth may be exposed to a combination of photography, graphic arts, video production and ceramic tile design.

"Just as important, they have a job and become part of a team that deals with project planning, time scheduling, compromise and public presentation,” Ellis stated. “I hear from business leaders about the great skills and real-world experience our students bring to a workplace.”

The artist determines a theme; the student apprentices then develop four sub-theme concepts that fit the site parameters. The students present their concepts to the city or business partnering on the project. Feedback is then incorporated to select and revise the final design. The selected design is brought to life. The sponsor host assists with the final installation and holds a dedication celebration. The entire process is accomplished in just eight weeks. To date, more than 60 teens have participated in bringing art to the West Valley.
“In the Hopi villages, including Oraibi and Walpi - which have no running water or electricity even today - KUYI provides a valued service of communication and connectivity... In every sense, you have helped to build community and sustain the good things of Hopi life.”

ENRICHING COMMUNITY LIFE

“The Trust’s reputation for excellence set the stage for us,” Ellis said. “There was some risk-taking, but the confidence and financial support to get us launched made this program sing. And it has attracted further support for us.”

The Council is now providing direction to schools, from elementary to community colleges, to introduce artistic growth back into curricula, according to Ellis.

“I believe a young person’s number one job is to find out what their passion in life is. Find out what they will be best at. Our job is to open those ideas, ignite and foster that passion,” she said. “The momentum has begun, the arts are on the map for a new generation in the West Valley.”

The Gallery 37 sculpture (notice the sculpted faces) is the centerpiece of the Palm Valley Water Reclamation community park.

Group dynamics and children helping each other are a focus of The Orchard School’s Indiana Partnership for Young Writers.
There will be many wonderful programs and presentations at the Nina Mason Pulliam Auditorium that will be enjoyed by the community for many years and generations to come.

INDEPENDENT ACCOUNTANTS’ REPORT

Trustees
Nina Mason Pulliam Charitable Trust
Indianapolis, Indiana

We have audited the accompanying statements of financial position of the Nina Mason Pulliam Charitable Trust as of December 31, 2002 and 2001, and the related statements of activities and cash flows for the years then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of the Trust’s management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audits.

We conducted our audits in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audits provide a reasonable basis for our opinion.

In our opinion, the financial statements referred to above present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the Nina Mason Pulliam Charitable Trust as of December 31, 2002 and 2001, and the changes in its net assets and its cash flows for the years then ended, in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.

NOTES TO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

Note 1: Organization
The Nina Mason Pulliam Charitable Trust (Trust) is a continuing trust established under the provisions of Article 5 of the Nina Mason Pulliam Revocable Trust Agreement. The term of the Trust shall be for 50 years after the date of death of Nina Mason Pulliam, which was March 26, 1997. During the Trust’s term, the Trustees are directed to distribute annually the higher of all of the Trust’s net income or the distributable amount necessary to comply with federal tax laws from the Trust property to qualified organizations. Upon the expiration of the Trust term, the principal and remaining income shall be distributed to qualified organizations.

The Trust seeks to help people in need, especially women, children and families; to protect animals and nature; and to enrich community life through grantmaking in the metropolitan areas of Indianapolis, Indiana, and Phoenix, Arizona. In 2001, the Trust implemented the Nina Mason Pulliam Legacy Scholars program, which seeks individuals 25 years and older who have dependents and share the goal of acquiring a college degree to enhance future opportunities for their families. Others assisted through this program include financially independent young adults seeking to enter college for the first time who have grown up in the child welfare system and college-age youth and adults with physical disabilities.

Note 2: Summary of Significant Accounting Policies
The Trust maintains its records on the accrual basis of accounting. Some of the more significant accounting policies used by the Trust are as follows:

Use of Estimates
The preparation of financial statements in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the reported amounts of assets and liabilities and disclosure of contingent assets and liabilities at the date of the financial statements and the reported amounts of revenues, expenses and other changes in net assets during the reporting period. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

Cash and Cash Equivalents
Cash and cash equivalents consist of bank deposits in federally insured accounts and money market funds. At December 31, 2002, the Trust’s cash accounts exceeded federally insured limits by approximately $6,300,000. For purposes of the statements of cash flows, the Trust considers highly liquid investments with an original maturity of three months or less when purchased to be cash equivalents.

Investments
Investments are carried at fair value. Realized and unrealized gains and losses are reflected in the statements of activities.

Securities Lending
The Trust has entered into a securities lending agreement and guaranty with the Bank of New York. Cash, U.S. Government securities, and/or letters of credit can collateralize loaned securities. Collateral required is equal to 102 percent of the current market value of the loaned securities. Income earned from the secured lending transactions is recorded as investment income. The Trust continues to carry the loaned securities as its assets. As of December 31, 2002, the total amount of securities subject to this program was $14,536,788.

Revenue and Expense Recognition
Revenues and expenses are reported on the accrual method.

Federal Excise Tax
The Trust is a tax-exempt organization under Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code (Code) and a private foundation under Section 509 of the Code. As a result, the Trust has not provided for state or federal income taxes. The Trust is subject to a federal excise tax of 1 percent or 2 percent on net investment income, as defined by the Code, and has recorded excise tax liabilities in the financial statements. Deferred federal excise taxes (benefits) result from the tax effects associated with unrealized appreciation (depreciation) on the Trust’s investments.

Equipment and Leasehold Improvements
Equipment, leasehold improvements, and automobiles are carried at cost. Depreciation is computed using the straight-line method based upon the estimated useful lives that range from three to 10 years.
NOTES TO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

Net Asset Classifications

The financial statements have been prepared in accordance with Statement of Financial Accounting Standards (SFAS) No. 117, Financial Statements of Not-for-Profit Organizations. SFAS No. 117 requires, among other things, that the financial statements report the changes in and total of each of the net asset classes, based upon donor restrictions, as applicable. Net assets are to be classified as unrestricted, temporarily restricted and permanently restricted.

All net assets of the Trust are unrestricted and may be used at the discretion of the Trustees to support the Trust’s purposes and operations.

Note 3: Federal Excise Taxes

Federal excise taxes, which are provided at 1 percent in the statements of activities for the years ended December 31, 2002 and 2001, included the following components:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>

Note 5: Derivative Financial Instruments

The Trust employs six investment managers to manage its portfolio. These managers are required to follow the Trust’s investment policy with regards to investment risk and yield. In connection with manager contracts, the Trust can invest in U. S. Treasury futures contracts, fixed income options, swaps and money market futures primarily to enhance the overall yield of investments and to place its investment portfolio at a certain position on the yield curve. Credit loss exposure exists in the event of nonperformance by the other parties, principally large brokerage firms, to such instruments.

The following net realized gains and losses relating to the Foundation’s derivative instruments have been included in the statements of activities for the years ended December 31.

NOTES TO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

Note 6: Operating Leases
The Trust has entered into noncancellable 10-year office space leases in Indianapolis, Indiana, and Phoenix, Arizona. Both leases include provisions for inflationary rent increases and require the Trust to pay for its share of building operating costs above the base year amount. The Trust has the option to extend each lease for an additional five years beyond the expiration of the initial term. Rent expense for space in Indianapolis and Phoenix totaled $310,259 and $271,451 for the years ended December 31, 2002 and 2001.

Future minimum rents to be paid under these leases, excluding future escalation for rents, realizable taxes and building operating expenses, are:

Note 7: Employee Benefit Plans
The Trust maintains a wage deferral plan qualified under Section 401(k) of the Internal Revenue Code that covers all participating employees. The Trust makes 7 percent non-contributory contributions to each employee’s 401(k) plan account based upon that employee’s wages and provides matching funds on a dollar-for-dollar basis up to the first 4 percent of an employee’s discretionary contribution. Total Trust contributions to the plan were $153,055 in 2002 and $57,021 in 2001.

In 2001, the Trust also maintained a money purchase defined-contribution plan. In December 2001, the money purchase plan was amended to eliminate employer contributions effective January 1, 2002. In February 2002, all plan assets were transferred into the Trust’s 401(k) plan and the money purchase plan subsequently terminated. Total Trust contributions to the money purchase plan in 2001 were $92,392.

Note 8: Program Expenses
Total expenses for the years ending December 31, 2002 and 2001, were $19,128,622 and $22,369,820. Expenses related to the Trust’s philanthropy program for the years ending December 31, 2002 and 2001, were $16,224,303 and $18,841,234, and expenses for management and general and investment expenses were $2,904,319 and $3,528,586.

Note 9: Grant and Scholarship Commitments
At December 31, 2002, grant and scholarship commitments are expected to be paid to qualifying organizations as follows:

NINA MASON PULLIAM

Nina Mason Pulliam (1906-1997) was a journalist, a business leader, a humanitarian and a lover of all creatures.

Nina Mason Pulliam was born in 1906 in rural Martinsville, Indiana, one of seven children. As a high school sophomore, she received her first compensation for a literary essay. She went on to study journalism at Franklin College in Franklin, Indiana, and later attended Indiana University and the University of New Mexico. After college, she took a full-time job at Farm Life, a national magazine published in Spencer, Indiana. When the magazine folded during the Depression, she went to work in Lebanon, Indiana, for an ambitious newspaper publisher named Eugene C. Pulliam. They were married in 1941.

During their marriage, the Pulliams traveled abroad extensively as a husband and wife writing team. They were among the first Americans to visit and write about post-World War II conditions in Europe. Over 11 years, Nina Pulliam was published in newspapers throughout North America and her articles were compiled into seven books.

Nina Pulliam was the founding secretary-treasurer and a director of Central Newspapers, Inc., which Mr. Pulliam had established in 1934. Upon his death in 1975, she served as president of CNI until 1979 and was publisher of The Arizona Republic and The Phoenix Gazette until 1978. Gannett Newspapers, Inc. purchased CNI in 2000.

She was the first woman admitted to Sigma Delta Chi, now the Society of Professional Journalists. Mrs. Pulliam also loved flying and was the first woman to earn a private pilot’s license in Indiana. She was known for her lifelong love of animals and for her nature conservancy efforts.

Nina Pulliam was a compassionate business and civic leader, devoting many hours to civic, charitable and community work. During her career, she shared her financial success and business leadership skills with many charities in Indianapolis and Phoenix.
“The resources you have made available will significantly enhance our opportunity to serve over 75,000 students expected to visit our Center this school year.”

GRANT APPLICATION INFORMATION

MISSION
The Nina Mason Pulliam Charitable Trust seeks to help people in need, especially women, children and families; to protect animals and nature; and to enrich community life in the metropolitan areas of Indianapolis and Phoenix.

GEOGRAPHIC PRIORITIES
In keeping with the wishes of Mrs. Pulliam, the Trust gives priority to charitable organizations that serve the communities of Indianapolis and Phoenix; secondary consideration is given to the states of Indiana and Arizona. The Trust may consider grant proposals on an occasional basis from national organizations whose programs benefit Indianapolis and Phoenix and/or benefit society as a whole.

WHAT THE TRUST WILL AND WILL NOT CONSIDER FUNDING
The Trust makes grants only to tax-exempt organizations whose purposes are described in Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code that are either (1) public charities described in Sections 509(a) or (2) private operating foundations described in Section 4942(j)(3).

Requests for funding are limited to one request per organization per calendar year. This includes the Summer Youth Program Fund in Indiana. For these purposes, an “organization” generally refers to that entity to which the IRS has issued a Section 501(c)(3) determination letter. For more detailed information and examples, please refer to the Question and Answer section posted on our website at www.ninapulliamtrust.org.

The Trust will not consider grants for international activities, academic research, sectarian purposes, programs that promote religious doctrine or political campaigns. Also, the Trust does not make grants to individuals.

The Trust will not accept unsolicited proposals from colleges and universities for operating or capital requests. (The latter includes endowments for professorial chairs, faculty training and research, scholarships, and building campaigns.) However, the Trust will continue to accept proposals through its regular grant cycles for support of projects that link higher education institutions to their communities through service learning opportunities. From time to time, the Trust may consider circulating requests for proposals on a case-by-case basis.

SCHEDULE AND SCOPE OF FUNDING
The Trust accepts proposals three times a year. In 2003, the Trust expects to distribute approximately $13.3 million in grants. (Final distribution amounts depend on the performance of the Trust’s invested assets.) Generally, the Nina Mason Pulliam Charitable Trust will disburse funds as a one-year grant or over a period no longer than three years. Requests for funding are limited to one request per organization per calendar year.

TYPE OF SUPPORT
The Trust makes grants for program projects and capital needs. The latter includes equipment and/or buildings and, to a limited extent, endowments. The Trust also will consider grants for overall operating support to stabilize management and finances of organizations that have been in existence for three years or less or for established organizations that can document major changes in income generation that threaten their future existence.
